III. The whole is comprised in thirty Numbers, and a Part of the Geography and Gazetteer is given in each.

EXTRACT FROM THE MONTHLY REVIEW, AUG. 1796:

"Mr. Walker has compressed a great deal of information in a very small compass, and has interspersed his narrative with a variety of remarks and reflections, which do equal honour to the man and the philosopher. This work abounds with striking and some peculiar sentiments; which, on the whole, justly merit our commendation, as being well adapted for the information and improvement of youth. It may also be considered as an agreeable companion for those who have frequently turned over the pages of ancient and modern history. Books of this nature are generally written in a dry unanimated manner, with scarcely the shadow of sentimentality; but the character of Mr. W's performance is so much the reverse of this, that we think it peculiarly valuable for the author's

No. XIX. which commences the fourth Fasciculus of

A CABINET OF QUADRUPEDS;

Consisting of highly-finished Engravings of Animals, chiefly by TOOKEY, from elegant DRAWINGS by J. IBBETSON, R.A.; with Descriptions Historic and Scientific, by J. CHURCH, Surgeon.

This Work is printed on super-royal Vellum Paper, in Quarto, and will be completed in Fifty Numbers, each containing two Engravings, with appropriate Descriptions.

N. B. A few of the very first Impressions are taken on Imperial Paper, Price 8s. per Number.

“ This is one of the modern works, in which the graphic arts have united with typography, to produce a literary luxury, worthy of the refined taste and splendor of the age.” Monthly Review, September, 1796.

“ This publication, as far as it is at present advanced, seems entitled, in a considerable degree, to the attention and patronage of the public.

“ The drawings appear to have been made with accuracy; and the engravings are executed in a style of elegance which we have not often seen. The principal figures, accompanied with appropriate appendages and scenery, appear with characteristic animation, and the whole is finished in a masterly manner.” Analytical Review, Nov. 1796. and 1797.

“ We here announce the commencement of a beautiful and interesting work: an account of Quadrupeds, the representations of which are remarkable for the singular elegance of the designs and engravings. The artist who has been employed in making the drawings is IBBETSON, whose skill, in that branch of design, requires no studied encomium. The engraver's name, TOOKEY, is new to us, but will infallibly become better known to all, from the merit he has here displayed.

“ We shall only add, that the typography of this work is as elegant, in its kind, as the plates; and that the continuance of so pleasing a publication will give a pleasure to us, which probably we shall participate with many lovers of natural history.” British Critic, May, 1797.

“ Having already expressed at large our approbation of Mr. Murray's English Grammar, we have only, in announcing this Abridgment, to observe, that it appears to us to be made with great judgment, and that we do not know a performance of this kind better fitted for the use of children. This small Grammar has also the recommendation of being very nearly printed. It may be very properly used as an introduction to the Author's
